

Website Resources for Science Fair Projects

All Science Fair Projects: Science Fair Projects with Complete Instructions

<http://www.All-science-fair-projects.com>

This website was developed by science lovers to explore science experiments and topic ideas. Click on browse topics and then general science categories (physics, chemistry, etc.) to find project ideas that include a difficulty rating, i.e., high school, middle school, or elementary school.

Cool-Science-Projects.com

<http://www.cool-science-projects.com/Science-Fair-Project-Ideas.html>

Links walk you through the process of science experiments and science fair projects as well as provides project ideas.

Discovery.com: Science Fair Central

<http://School.discoveryeducation.com/sciencefaircentral>

"Creative investigations into the real world." This site provides a complete guide to science fair projects. Check out the "Handbook" which features information from Janice VanCleave, a popular author who provides everything you need to know for success. You can even send her a question about your project.

DragonflyTV Science Fair

<http://pbskids.org/dragonflytv/scifair/index.html>

A fun and advertising free website for students to search for science fair ideas.

Exploratorium "Science Snacks"

<http://www.exploratorium.edu/explore>

This website from leading hands-on science museum offers "Science Snacks"-- hands-on, teacher-tested activities that can be done at home using cheap, readily available materials and are readily adaptable as science fair experiments.

Internet Public Library

<http://www.ipl.org/div/projectguide/>

Are you looking for some help with a science fair project? If so, then you have come to the right place. The IPL will guide you to a variety of web site resources, leading you through the necessary steps to successfully complete a science experiment.

MadSci Network: The Laboratory That Never Sleeps

<http://www.madsci.org>

Represents a collection from scientists providing answers to ?s. Plus a variety of other info.

Neuroscience for Kids: Successful Science Fair Projects

<http://faculty.washington.edu/chudler/fair.html>

Site made by Lynne Bleeker a former science teacher, science fair organizer, and judge. Gives a thorough and detailed description of the steps to a successful science fair project.

Resources for Parents: Science Fair Planning Guide

http://go.hrw.com/resources/go_sc/hst/HSTGP331.PDF

This is another science fair planning guide. It is a great resource for parents with children in the older elementary grades.

Science Buddies

<http://www.sciencebuddies.org/>

This website has a wide range of helpful information spanning the entire process of planning and executing a science fair project. Check out the students section tab. Answer questions that indicate your student's interests and it will generate a list of possible project topics.

Science Fair Adventure

<http://www.sciencefairadventure.com/>

Large database of science fair experiments searchable by scientific field.

Science Fair Idea Exchange

<http://scienceclub.org/scifair.html>

Science fair idea exchange categorized by “beginner,” “medium” and “advanced” project ideas. Includes links to Youtube videos of experiments.

Steve Spangler Science: Experiments

<http://www.stevespanglerscience.com/experiments/>

Well known science “guy” offers large database of experiments adaptable to science fair projects.

Super Science Fair Projects: Ideas, Topics and Experiments

<http://www.Super-science-fair-projects.com>

This website includes tabs for students and parents which gives information for completing all steps of the science fair project.

Teachers TryScience: Kids Try Science

<http://www.teacherstryscience.org/kids>

The “Kids Try Science” tab on this teacher website has a search function for many “kids experiments” contributed by quality education institutions such as science centers and children’s museums.

The Science Page

<http://Sciencepage.org>

This website contains a variety of science categories. If you click on Science Fair Projects, you will go to a page with multiple science fair resource links.